The first film studio in Fort Lee was established in 1904 by Thomas Edison. Edison's studio was followed by a number of other studios, including Biograph, Vitagraph, and Fox Film Corporation. By the early 1920s, Fort Lee was home to over 30 film studios and produced over 800 films per year.

The film industry in Fort Lee reached its peak in the 1920s. During this time, the town was home to some of the biggest stars in Hollywood, including Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, and Charlie Chaplin. However, the film industry in Fort Lee began to decline in the late 1920s. The rise of the sound film and the Great Depression led to the closure of many film studios in Fort Lee.

By the early 1930s, the film industry in Fort Lee was all but gone. However, the town's legacy as the "Film Capital of the World" lives on. Today, Fort Lee is home to the Fort Lee Film Commission, which works to promote the film industry in the town. The commission also organizes a number of film festivals and events throughout the year.
